Why Use Profanity?

L. McVeer

It is said that one of the reasons why so many individuals use profanity is that they are unaware that there are other forms of discourse that are even more descriptive in their respective languages which are acceptable that may be resorted to during the incident, a situation or an individual.

The fact that there are so many individuals who constantly indulge in or resort to profanity when they are attempting to be descriptive, forceful, colorful and persuasive makes it an unquestionable that there are many who are unfamiliar with many of the acceptable terms that can be used to obtain the same goals as those descriptive, unacceptable vocables commonly referred to as profanity.

In institutions of higher learning the inhabitants are not expected to use profanity in obtaining objectives which can be accomplished in a more intelligent and professional manner. However, in many institutions the same tactics employed by outside unprofessional and un-intelligent sources are used by many of the low level aspirant professionals in our institutions.

Profanity used in the presence of male or female shows that the user has not in properly trained, that his culture has sunk below acceptable standards, that the user is disrespectful and that his vocabulary is very limited.

At one time it was rare indeed to hear profane words spoken on a college campus. However, today profanity seems to be as much a part of the college as progressive education. Is this new fad due to the fact that ladies and gentlemen do not demand as much respect today as they once did, or is it something that is inseparable from our present age?

There are certain basic principles that must be adhered to if the atmosphere in a college environment is to be more wholesome than the environs of the gutter. Since profanity and the gutter are so closely associated, college campuses throughout the world should be endeavoring to destroy this contagious, crippling malady and locate an acceptable substitute.

The demanding of the respect that is due and the enacting of laws prohibiting the use of profanity among all who enroll the college walls would be a tremendous move toward making it less difficult for strangers to determine whether they are among inhabitants of our most undesirable circumjacentcies.

What's Wrong With Our Programs?

L. McVeer

During the past four quarters many of the students who support many of our activities here at the college financially have failed to be present at many of the affairs which they have made possible through the paying of an activity fee which is used to sponsor many of the cultural programs which are presented here on the campus.

Evidently there must be some dissatisfaction on the part of the students since they do sponsor the activities and fail to attend them.

Assuming that there is not a student among us who will willingly part with his money for a purpose for which he reaps no benefits and yet witnessing this type of action every time an "activity" feature is presented on the campus, makes the author think that the type of entertainment that is being presented is not chosen in accord with the sentiments of the majority of those who make these features possible.

Since there is none among us who has been a careful observer over a period of time who can truthfully state that our cultural activities, especially the lyricum features, have been attended by at least forty per cent of those who support the program financially, one feels as though some type of investigation should be made to determine why so few of the financiers are present at the concerts which they sponsor.

If it has not dawned upon anyone to poll the students or the sponsors and let them suggest or decide who shall entertain them or what type of entertainment they desire, then the author is recommending that the student body be permitted to select its features. When this is done there will be no reason to doubt that each feature that is presented in the future in the auditorium will have in attendance a greater majority of its contributors, provided that they are given an opportunity to select with advice from authorities the type of entertainment they prefer.

The Periscope

By C. Eugene Hubbard

Officials report that sanctions would not force Israel to yield, and reports that the Commodity Credit Corporation notes increase in farm price loss, are some major and important issues facing our nation and the world today.

Senator Byrd, a Democrat from Virginia, has made a proposal that Congress cut President Eisenhower's $7,800,000,000 budget by at least five billion dollars, in an effort to guard against inflation. Senator Byrd, who heads the Senate Financial Committee, reveals that he is drawing up an alternate budget calling for specific reductions in non-defense spendings. Byrd was quoted as saying that Eisenhower's budget is inflationary at a time when our nation is facing a definite threat of inflation. He said it represented an increase in domestic spending of seven billion dollars over outlays in the fiscal year 1954. He continued that he was still working on his proposed budget but it indicated that his attacks will be directed largely at what he termed "intrenched spending" on domestic projects. Senator Byrd added that the worst feature of the President's budget is that almost all government increases it proposes in non-defense spending call for permanent and not emergency spending.

Mrs. Golda Meir reportedly said that hardships incidental to any United Nation economic pressure would not drive Israel away from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. Arab spokesmen quoted her as saying, "Israel cannot leave these points without guarantees of security against renewed Arab raids of the Strip and against renewed Egyptian blockade of the Gulf which leads from the Red Sea to the Israeli Port of Elath."

United Nations Secretary General Hammarskjold warned on a report which he hopes will tell the Assembly that Israel had not complied with the Assembly's six successive resolutions calling for withdrawal.

In Tel Aviv it was reported that Prime Minister Ben-Gurion has told President Eisenhower that Israel now insists on freedom of the Suez Canal passage as part of its Sinai evacuation price, but later reports revealed that western diplomats predicted that Israel would remove its forces out of Egypt as a result of U. S. support of its claim to free navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba.

Reports are that government losses in supporting farm prices during the Eisenhower administration have been nearly three times greater than the total losses during the preceding 20 years of the federal farm aid program. Deficits have been particularly heavy during recent years, reflecting accumulation of large surplus supplies and vigorous government efforts to get rid of them.

President's Message

In most of the undergraduate colleges in the United States some consideration is given to religion. Many institutions have a period designated as religious emphasis. During this period special effort is made to enlist the participation of all students and faculty personnel. The program usually includes the services of an outside individual who has been selected for his ability to make contributions in the area of religion. The vigorous activity centered about religion usually subsides after the evaluation report.

When one studies the extent to which religion functions in the life of each individual and the culture in which we live, one wonders how an area so important can be considered lightly for most of the weeks in the academic year. The limitations on inclusion of religious offerings do not offer valid excuse for the omission. It is evident that all of the worthwhile learnings which young people and adults need can not be included in the ordinary college curriculum. Since much of the education is acquired through living and learning outside of the classroom, there is little ground for not providing for religion.

In general it is true that as the individual grows older, the individual's responsibility for his education becomes increasingly greater. Many of the extra-class activities, programs and movements associated with the colleges and developed to answer the needs of students for a broader and richer period of college education indicate the recognition of this principle. The values of religion constitute some of the most fundamental needs for effective living. Religion assists one in developing desirable attitudes toward living, tolerance, respect for others, willingness to understand, and the integration of personality. The Christian outlook on life is in harmony with the basic institutions of society—the family, the systems of law and justice, the school, our democratic ideals, and our concept of a good citizen.

A study of our history and cultural development will reveal that religion has been responsible for the progressive extension and reinterpretation of our ideals and goals from generation to generation. It is reasonable to expect that the culture will continue to contribute to and be influenced by religion. While this is true of the society in which we live, it is likewise true of the individual personality. Many individuals who are diligent and void of meaning have never discovered what wonders religion can work. One does not need to travel far or to talk with many individuals to find examples of how religion has given new meaning to life and behavior. Religion is something to be kept alive, to be used frequently, to be extended and deepened.

Engagement rings for men? Jewelry manufacturers have been suggesting it.

The Oklahoma Daily at University of Oklahoma found out what some Sooner students think about it.

"Too expensive," said one coed. "The girl and her family have to pay for the wedding. That's enough."

Other comments: "Men are too conservative to wear them." "Buying an engagement ring would hurt women's femininity." "Men don't want people to know they're engaged. It would inhibit them."

Purdue Students Must Make "C"

Students at Purdue University now have to work harder to be recognized as a Distinguished Student. The faculty this year agreed to raise the index necessary for Distinguished to 5.5 and to put the stipulation in the code that the student must pass each course with a grade of C or better.

With the changes made in Paragraph 24.00 of the University Code, it now reads as follows: Distinguished Students: At the conclusion of each semester the Registrar shall indicate which regular undergraduate students were distinguished in their scholastic work as indicated by the grades they received at the close of the semester.

Suitable publicity shall be given to the names of these students. To be cited as a Distinguished Student in any semester one must:

- (a) Complete successfully all the courses to which he has been assigned with a grade of C or better except any that have been cancelled without a semester grade.
 - (b) Have completed at least 14 semester hours.
 - (c) Attain a semester scholarship index of at least 5.50.
- Originally, the practice of recognizing a student with 5.00

index was started to honor approximately the top 10 per cent of the students. Either due to harder work on the part of the students or to liberalized grading on the part of the faculty, or perhaps due to both, the number of students who were recognized as Distinguished has increased over the years until 23 to 24 per cent of the students received this honor.

It was felt that there should be something to honor those students who are receiving still better grades, so the new stipulations were added. In its new form, the code will disqualify any student who has an incomplete, an unsatisfactory in any zero credit course, or receive a D, E, or F in any course. However, it is still possible to be distinguished the following semester if the student gets excellent grades in the remainder of the subjects.

A Salute To Ghana

J. Campbell
On March 6, 1957 the echoes from the sacred bells of liberty will reverberate throughout the world marking the birth of a new, free and independent country. On that date the colorful Gold Coast Colony will cease its existence and in its place the United Ghana will be born.

The Gold Coast—a British Colony since 1874—will become the newest Negro republic and the first black republic within the British Commonwealth of Nations. On the vast African continent the new republic will become the seventh independent nation, a distinction now held only by Libya, Egypt, the Sudan, Ethiopia, Liberia and the Union of South Africa.

At the head of the government will stand Kwame Nkrumah, the American-educated former Minister, who has labored indefatigably for the country's independence. Nkrumah's task of leading the new state is far from an easy one. His major job is that of appeasing the tribal chieftains, who fear a loss of power, because the new government is to be a strong centralized one.

The potentialities of Ghana are tremendous. Economically, the country is stable, with cocoa accounting for most of the income. Other important commodities, and lumber are some of the other money products, which have led to the economic stabilization of the country, aiding it in their bid for independence.

The eyes of Africa and the world are centered on Ghana as it begins to prepare for the difficult job that lies ahead. That job is one of proving to the world that it is quite capable of self-government. Much of the future success of other independent-minded African territories, in their bid for freedom, will depend on the ability of Nkrumah to successfully govern the new state along democratic lines.

The road to freedom has been a hard and extremely difficult one for Ghana; now that her freedom is assured, it is hoped by all the free world that she will become an example, and will act as a beacon of light to the other colonial-dominated nations along the path to independence and freedom.

Hysteria Is Shocking

(APC—Southern M e t h o d i s t University's GAMPUS received and published this letter to the "Forlorn" column. It comments on a current phenomenon.

Yesterday marked the Dallas opening of the late James Dean's last movie, "Giant," which is morbidly being exploited by Hollywood publicity men. The surge of hysteria over this maladjusted, but shocking, young Steve Allen and Ed Sullivan have stooped to hero worshiping of this rotten idol. Such unscrupulous propagandizing about the glorification of reckless driving and cruelty to women would be ludicrous, if it were not so grotesquely wrong.

Contrary to popular thought Jimmie Dean did not die a hero's death. No, he died as he lived, showing a wanton disregard of society, speeding down a California highway at 90 miles an hour, with a mind apparently bent on mischief. It is such grossly antisocial behavior scarcely warrants the shedding of maudlin tears.

Actually Dean was emotionally immature, uneducated, and uncaring. He was morose, surly and considered by his fellow actors as physically dirty. . . . It is shameful that this measure of immaturity can have the veneration and perversion of the purportedly well-balanced emotions of American youth. When the evil man has done only a false myth this is ample reason to vitiate the validity of the revered maxim, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum"—speak nothing but good of the dead.

We Worry and Wonder

American college students are feeling unusually worried about world affairs. In the rust of student days, there still is time for thought. A DAILY TROJAN editorial reflects this.

Seven o'clock in the evening. A breeze, crisp and sharp, stings quietly through the campus. The night is clean and fresh. Benny Morgan, 20 years old, looks toward and up at the steel-like stars mounted in a sky of clear blackness. His pants are tan, buckle in back. . . . He is a college student, a sophomore. . . . The loneliness of the desert walks and paths, the stillness. . . . all these invite thinking. They probe the mind of young Mr. Morgan. He recalls the black screaming headlines of a tumultuous November. Headlines inspired on a foreign soil, heathered and nourished by a hot wind from the East.

Headlines about Communist-controlled people thirsting for liberation. The rape of Hungary. . . . Headlines about the Suex Canal closed to the British and France threaten war. Blood-soaked hair mats thickly against smashed skulls. Far away from Benny Morgan. A million miles from the parade of hysterical crowds of a Saturday gridiron battle. A million miles from the grammatical construction of an English composition. A million miles from a parade and a smiling queen who surveys her campus domain with happiness.

But war pays no homage to distance. Her far-stained fingers of a grasping Europe point to Benny Morgan. They beckon and say, "The time has come. . . . the bombs are ready. . . . you are young. . . . strong. . . . and you must help Uncle Sam save the world. . . . Not knowing when, not knowing where, the uncertain and the unknown are the only conditions. When will I have to save the world? Will it be now? Tomorrow? Or is it possible that the time will never come?"

Uncle Sam has selective service board that will provide you with the proper notification. When will the summons come? When will the postman stand in front of my house and deposit a letter that will take me from my home, my school, my friends? No, Mr. Morgan, your question cannot be answered this night. You must sit and contemplate a world hungry for death. You must wait like a thousand other students. . . .
