Sherman Roberson, Tiger's Roar Student Editor, Wins Acclaim for SSC

By Marvin Green
Sherman Roberson, senior chemistry major and Editor-in-Chief of the Tiger's Roar, student publication at Savannah State College, recently returned after participating in the Second Southern Student Human Relations Seminar, National Student Congress, and Operation Friendship in Havana, Cuba.

Roberson was a scholarship participant of the Second Student Human Relations Seminar held at the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, Illinois. He was active in discussion groups, panels and case studies concerning the improvement of Human Relations in the South. While at the Seminar, he was co-author of a pamphlet entitled, Programming For Leadership In Predominantly Negro Institutions.

Roberson also represented Savannah State College at the 12th National Student Congress held at the University of Illinois, August 24-September 3. The congress procedure is parallel with the procedure of the congress of the United States. He was author of a bill that will be sent to the President of the United States, which received only four votes of opposition when it reached the floor of the plenary at the congress. He was elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Great Southeast Region of the United States Student Association (which includes Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida).

The Federacion Estudiantil Universitaria (translation) FEU invited a hundred and ninety Student Leaders from the 12th National Student Congress of the United States National Student Association to participate in "Operation Amistad" (operation friendship) at Havana, Cuba. Roberson wrote a 250 word essay and was selected to represent Savannah State College. He and the other North American Students spent an 8-day tour of Cuba. The group resided at the Habana Hilton Hotel during their stay. The students of the United States were addressed by Cuban Liberator and Premier Fidel Castro. In his address Dr. Castro expressed the need for better understanding between the U. S. and Latin American countries. He also emphasized that Cuba would never be overcome by communistic influences.

Roberson was interviewed by a Cuban reporter and his picture and interview appeared in the September issue of Cuadernos, one of Cuba's leading magazines.

Alpha Phi Alpha Plans Project

"A voteless people is a hopeless people." This slogan was adopted by Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Incorporated, 22 years ago and is more apparent today than at any time since our emancipation.

Delta Eta Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Incorporated, recognizes that a fundamental step in the march to "first-class citizenship" is the registration and awareness of the obligation to vote, of all eligible persons and especially the College men and women.

Howard Jason Delivers Address

By Marvin L. Green

Mr Howard Jason delivered the principal address during the regular all-college assembly on October 22, at 12 noon in Meldrim Auditorium.

Mr. Jason, Instructor in the Department of Languages and Literature, chose as his thesis: "Imagination." He stated that "whatever we do, we may need a number of qualities, but we must have imagination, "the power which enables a woman to take a scrap of cloth, a bit of wire, and make a hat out of them."

He set forth that the imagination when used without control can cause one to waste away one's time in day dreaming, and also that a lack of imagination may be equally harmful.

The introduction of the speaker was made by Eddie Bryant; closing remarks, by President William K. Payne.

"Beauty lies in the eyes of all who behold." Pictured above are Josie West, Attendant; Josie Simpson, Miss Savannah State College; Deane Johnson, Attendant. These lovely ladies will represent Savannah State College throughout 1959-60.

Mrs. Ella Fisher Delivers Chapel Address

By Edith P. Albright

The regular All-College Assembly held on October 15, 1959, in Meldrim Auditorium, had as its speaker Mrs. Ella Fisher, Associate Professor of Health Education.

Mrs. Fisher selected as her thesis: "Living With A Purpose." She said that every individual must set some goal and work with a purpose, and in order to do this, one must establish a vision of the "Good Life."

Jeanes Conference Held At Savannah State

Having for its theme "The Dean Approach To The Improvement of Instruction," the Seventh Annual Conference of Jeanes Supervisors and Principals sponsored by the State Department of Education began its conference in Meldrim Auditorium Friday, October 16, with an assembly program and opening sessions.

Mayor W. Lee Mingleford led the assembly of greetings followed by distinguished members of the Board of Education, including Mr. Edward Bartlett, president, and Dr. L. Leon McCormac, Superintendent.

The mayor informed the audience of the progress made in education and expressed the need to continue in that direction.

The opening session developed from two panel discussions moderated by Mr. Hugh Mass of Tuskegee and Dr. W. Bruce Welch of Port Valley. Mr. H. N. Stinson presided over the opening session.

During the assembly program, Beach and O Tompkins High School Chorus gave selections.

Other features on the program included greetings by Savannah State College President W. K. Payne, and Cuyler Elementary School Principal, Mr. Malcolm G. Thomas. Reverend Richard Williams, pastor of First Bryan Baptist Church, delivered a prayer and Mr. J. E. Luten, principal of Tompkins High School, presided.

Mr. T. A. Carmichael, Director of the Division of Negro Education, State Department of Education, gave remarks during the opening session. Mr. Carmichael relayed to the audience of Supervisors and Principals pertinent information and facts related to the field of education.

The General Session was held on Saturday, October 17 at 9:30 a.m. The program included a panel discussion moderated by Dr. D. L. Bogers of Atlanta, Georgia's Foreign Language Program presented by Dr. Gordon Brown, and various reports on discussion groups moderated by Dr. L. E. Boyd, including Miss Margaret L. Walker, library consultant and Mr. Robert Thearth, curriculum consultant.

President Payne Addresses SSC Family

By Marjorie Dalida

The first all-college assembly program of the fall quarter was held in Meldrim Auditorium on October 1, 1959, with President William K. Payne as its speaker. President Payne selected as his thesis: "The Personal Mirror." According to President Payne, "... the value of a mirror lies within what the mirror reflects." He requested that the students of Savannah State College peer into the "mirror of our generation" and see if they are demonstrating traits of a high calibre or those of a "beat" generation. And as you look onto your personal mirrors, it is hoped that you will draw the picture of a successful future.

Affluence Cheatham Addresses Assembly

By Carolyn Campbell

Mr. Affluence Cheatham, principal of Sol C Johnson High School, delivered the main address during the all-college assembly on October 8th. The program was sponsored by the Sphinx Club of Delta Eta Chapter, Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Incorporated. The speaker was introduced by Robert Bess. The core of Mr. Cheatham's talk stressed the uselessness of mere words, the importance of action after thoughtful, and explicit trust in God. He stated "... Be more than a talker, be a doer."

Another highlight of the program was the vivid interpretation of the poem "Whod Built the Arc" by Leford Tobias.

Closing remarks were made by the Rev. A. E. Peacock, College Minister.

The Editor Speaks

Editor's Note: This editorial does not necessarily represent the views of the Faculty, Administration or Student Body of Savannah State College.

The past summer proved to be the most interesting period of my entire life. I attended the National Congress of the United States National Student Association at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois.

The congress was attended by students representing various colleges and universities throughout the United States. Upon my arrival there, I had no vision of the variety of events that were to occur. These events had a marked effect upon my evaluation of my fellow men.

This congress is paralleled with the procedure of the United States Congress. This first three days of the congress was given to discussion groups with various topics of interest. I was enrolled in the discussion group concerned with Desegregation. The group was composed of six students and I was the only one from Savannah State from North Carolina and stated that he shared a moderate view of the subject of integration. He set forth his purpose for registering in this particular group was the fact that integration was inevitable and he desired ways of bringing it about smoothly.

As the discussion progressed, a strange incident occurred. He came to the realization that the other views present were quite liberal. From this point on, the moderator's view became rather conservative.

The second day of discussion gave rise to many surprises. The size of the group increased tremendously. Two of the new participants were from South Carolina and shared the most conservative views concerning integration that I have ever entertained. These individuals presented a number of analogies supporting their views (negative) on the integration question. Of times I was guilty of employing impractical tactics by attacking these analogies very violently. Mine was a normal reaction, for never before had I the chance to discuss this topic with a member of the "majority." I attribute this fault to the isolation that is ever prevalent between members of the various "races."

One of the prime reasons for the anti-integration campaign which by my caucasian brothers was their "Rationalization On Segregation." With the help of some other caucasian brothers I was able to suppress this rationale. (At least from the discussion.)

Communication breeds understanding in abundance. I share a great deal of respect for my brothers from Carolina, however, I possess no allegiance to their conservative views. The discussion of the various views may or may not have converted their opinion of me or mine of them, but the important factor is that members of different "races" were sitting down at a table of "arbitration" and discussing a problem which is affecting the lives of every individual in the United States.

If the problems of the South are to be solved, then a system of race communications (on an equal basis) must be established. If the United States is to remain United, then this system must be established and God speed!

I feel that the students should have more to say about what affects them. The congressman does not necessarily reflect the views of the mass of people in the South and especially not the majority of the students. Adults, if we the students of today are to take the reins of the world of tomorrow, then let us "laste" this task now! Let us do our own thinking and our "advise" when necessary.

During the duration of the discussions, it was interesting to note that my brothers sought and in many cases found support of the positions of human rights in the North. This was supplied as rationale to "justify" the South's defiance of BROWN vs. BOARD OF EDUCATION during the student congress.

Upon leaving the congress, I left with many thoughts of a varied nature. But these were not thoughts of hate, but thoughts of thanks and understanding for such a valuable experience.

My Kind of Democracy

By Leford Tobias, Jr.

All too often today we tend to forget the great moral heritage which is ours. The bustle of everyday life, the everyday chores, the demands of our jobs—all these becloud our vision. America needs a rededication to the moral values which we passed on to our forefathers. These are the guideposts by which we should chart our course.

Today the nation is being attacked by a dangerous enemy—communism. The Communists seek to destroy our way of life. They would tear down the free government and establish a Soviet State. Our historic liberties would be wiped away. Instead of law we would be ruled by a fascist dictator. The concentration camp, the secret arrests, the purge trial would be the hallmarks of everyday life. Our destiny would be in the hands of a small clique from whose decisions there would be no appeal.

This is the danger we face today. Communism is an evil, it is atheistic, it bitterly hates all religions. The Communists detect men who live by the principles of fair play, justice, and brotherhood. To Communists, love is a sign of weakness. Only brute force, ruthlessly applied, has any meaning.

To meet the Communist challenge we in America must rely on the great moral heritage which is ours. We need to know more about the history of our nation. We need to appreciate the courage of the individuals who fought through wilderness, swamp, and mountain for the ideals in which they believed. We need to know the valor of the men of 1776. Our citizens should read and re-read the historic documents of America, such as the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, whose famous passage "We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal..." has lived in the hearts of men who gave their lives that this country might remain free and independent.

Points to Ponder

Albert Schweitzer in "Memories of Childhood and Youth":

No one has a right to say to me, "Because we belong to each other as we do, I have a right to know all your thoughts." Not even a mother may treat her child in that way. All demands of this sort are selfish and unwholesome. In this matter, giving is the only valuable process; it is only giving that stimulates impart as much as you can of your spiritual being to those who are on the road with you, and accept as something precious what comes back to you from them.

—Macmillan

John Foster Dulles:

It is my experience that those who are most positive about the world's problems are also the most positive in spite of the fact that they do not know all the relevant facts. Those who are most harsh in their judgments are able to be harsh for the same reason. When the whole of a problem is known, solutions become excessively difficult and judgments are not so easily made.

—From a 1955 speech before the Fifth Annual All-Jesuit Alumni Dinner

Robert Louis Stevenson in "Vigilant: Five Lessons and Familiar Studies of Men and Books":

Hope, they say, deserts us at the end of our existence. From first to last, and in the end, of smarting disillusiones, we continue to expect good fortune, better health and better conduct, and that confidently that we judge it needless to deserve them.

The Periscope

Looking Back

The recent visit by Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev might help ease the cold war tension which has faced the world for over a decade. However, Mr. "K" still holds his viewpoint that communism will bury capitalism. Not literally, but in the sense that communism will overtake the accomplishments of capitalism and push it off the globe. According to the dictator, over 200 million people, the Capitalistic system is reaching the point of diminishing returns and when the system can no longer employ the people, the workers will rise and overthrow the system.

What Khrushchev thinks about capitalism and what we think about communism do not alter the fact that these two leading systems in the world affairs must find a way to exist peacefully together on the same planet. According to the Soviet leader, "I speak of co-existence, not because I want capitalism to exist, but because... it does exist." "It does exist" are the words that both systems must recognize and respect. Our President Eisenhower must recognize this fact when he visits Russia when the cold spell is over and things are green again.

One Hiding Place

Cuba's Prime Minister Fidel Castro, eight months after a liberating Cuba from the Batista regime, seems to be approaching the same "pandora's box" that closed in on his conquered foe. Castro has constantly boasted of a democratic Cuba, a land of free people, but the two overt expressions of freedom are missing: freedom of the press and open elections.

As head of a disorganized government supplemented by chaos and confusion, Cuba is well approaching a police state type government. Among speaking out for private rights is doomed to the fate afforded all counter-revolutionaries.

In any event, the Sierra Maestra will welcome its long adopted companion. That is if he can escape in time.

A woman received two notices from the city: (1) the tax assessment on her tenement house was raised 20 per cent. (2) the building was declared unfit for occupancy.

Despite Nature's Ways

A recent incident occurred on this campus which fully merits the consideration of Mr. John Q. Student.

This incident occurred between two factions, which hereafter will refer to as faction A and faction B.

Faction A returned to school and began preparation for its annual activity. Things seemed to have been going very smoothly. But a few days before registration, a demon by the name of Confusion stuck his dirty head in the picture and the spark was lit.

Faction B, due to circumstances beyond its control, had ceased its "catering" to faction A. After faction A got the word, it decided to follow the example of the steel workers in order to get its ends.

A period of contemplation, ill-fated misanthropic thoughts existed between factions A and B for the next few days due to the lack of communication.

After three days, faction B got the word (by the grape vine) on faction A. Faction B immediately arranged a conference with faction A and other parties. This was presented as an impartial observer (if this is possible).

My evaluation of the entire situation is as follows:

(1) First of all faction B had "catered" to faction A, this "catering" was taken for granted.

(2) After faction A was forced to cease "catering," it was only fair that faction A should have been notified.

(3) Faction B should have been informed of the feelings of faction A. Its representatives, before the latter resorted to the methods of the steel workers.

Faction A was too reluctant in airing its views at the conference. I am glad no little girl came into the room and said "boo" because faction A might have been frightened.

This incident which I am submitting for your consideration, Mr. John Q. Student, is a perfect example of what happens when people fail to assume their responsibility to other persons and when other persons refuse to speak up and stand on their own two feet. This further explains what can happen if a system of communication does not exist between two factions.

A system where everyone in industry can speak freely and bluntly without fear of later embarrassment or punishment. My advice to factions A and B is "to get on the ball" despite Nature's Ways.

CONTINENTAL Classic Italian Style for Fall '59

By Alfonso McLean

This fall the Continental- versus-ivy controversy continues on Fifth Avenue and on the College Campuses around the country. The well dressed men of this country will continue to favor ivy because of the casual and day-to-day wear. In the area of definition one might wonder just what is Continental? In its most classic manifestation, Continental is definitely Italianate. It is characterized by the concept that clothes should fit the body just as gloves fit the hand. Sport jackets are short, and fitted to the point. Sleeves are slender and tapered. Lapels are narrow, tapered almost to snuggles, and detailed to show the correctness of the attire. Trousers, too, are extremely narrow, tapered to detail; the slacks are cuffless, pleated, with slash pockets rather than side pockets. Jackets can be three as well as two-button.

The word Continental, of course, does not apply solely to suits and sport jackets. The accessories with your Ivy outfits will do in company with the Continental styling. Shoes are thinner, more flexible; shirts are more form-fitting and narrower sleeves. Ties should be narrow and short enough so the ends don't protrude from the cutaway, sport jackets.

For casual and rough-weather wear are the high and sturdy boots. The boot takes a big step forward this fall. The introduction of the Continental suit and slacks, whose cuffs, trousers tend to snag in standard-high shoe tops, shows that elegance can now be included with casual wear.

How here are casual boot creations for sport, city wear on these rainy autumn days and cold winter nights on campus. So if in the past those unattractive overhoes have nagged you, now's the time to look correct, as well as one of the advanced men of style on your campus set.

Continental designs are not only tailored to perfection but are also narrow on the pocket-book. The Classic Continental suit (which includes a reversible vest), ranges from $45 to $70. The Modified Continental ranges from $39.95 to $60 and the American Continental from $65 to $110.

Well this fall there is a radical change in men's attire. Men of Savannah State College are you up-to-date with this fall's styles? The distinction of Continental captures and characterizes a typical college man over the average dressed man. As for me, I've catered to Continental and really dig it.

To those personalities who thrive somewhat as daring in dress to varying degrees, I challenge you to accept this new concept in clothing and be a classic on your campus this fall.

Professor Studies Love; Finds It Matter of Needs

Why do we fall in love? Professor Robert F. Winch, Northwestern University sociologist, knows why 50 young husbands and wives did and the results of his eight-year study of them are reported by Morton M. Hunt in a November Reader's Digest article, "How Do We Choose A Mate?"

According to Professor Winch's evidence, the love of man for woman and woman for man is basically self-serving; its primary purpose is to benefit the lover, not the beloved.

Each of us, he says, tends to fall in love with someone whose personality is the complement of our own and through whom we can therefore relieve our own frustrations and viciously live out our self-interest. As a tough, brusque, hard-driving man may long in secret to be a cared-for child again.

He cannot do this, so he falls in love with a timid, frail girl whom he enjoys sheltering—and through whom, by proxy, he enjoys that would-be other self. She, meanwhile, has always appeared to be more aggressive and competent, and because she identifies her life with his, she indirectly achieves her wish. So each benefits and fulfills the other, and so love, though selfish in its origin, succeeds in becoming a mutual blessing.

Professor Winch believes this dovetailing of psychological needs to be the essential reason for love and a far stronger force than sexual desire, beauty, or similarity of tastes. These needs change as boys and girls go to work or to college.

The Northwestern professor is 48, married and has written a book, "Mate Selection," published by Harper & Brothers at $5, explaining how he and his staff studied the 25 couples, all childless and all married less than two years when the study began, as to 388 pairs of traits. His wife, Martha, executive director of the Family Service of Highland Park, Ill., feels the need theory gives a marriage counselor a positive approach to problems.

Faculty Members Participate in Arts

Faculty members participating in teaching the integrated subjects of the basic curriculum at Chatham College are continually learning, since many of these courses are cross-disciplinary in nature.

In the two year course in the Arts, which correlates work in visual arts, drama, prose, fiction, poetry, music, and the dance, it is not unusual to see faculty members who instruct in different parts of the course, sitting in on each other's area presentations. Thus a musician, because he has become intimately familiar with the areas of the course devoted to poetry and the visual arts, is able to relate form in music to these areas; the faculty member in drama is able to correlate his specialty with those sections devoted to the dance and fiction. Some of the other cross-disciplinary courses where similar factors operate takes place are Human Development and Behavior (psychology and biology); and The Natural World (astronomy, biology, chemistry, physics, and the history and philosophy of science).

THE SPOTLIGHT

By Yvonne McGlockton

"Be the best of whatever you are" is a phrase that is commonly used by many. Dorothy Lawton is a living example of this phrase.

Dot (as she is called by all) is a sophomore majoring in Home Economics and specializing in textiles and clothing. She is an expert seamstress; several of her garments have been placed on various exhibitions. Last year during the annual awards day, she received an award of $100 for her proficiency in textiles and clothing.

Ironical, Isn't It?

From a letter written by a young man, who was receiving his basic training: "We were supposed to have survival training today but it was postponed on account of rain."

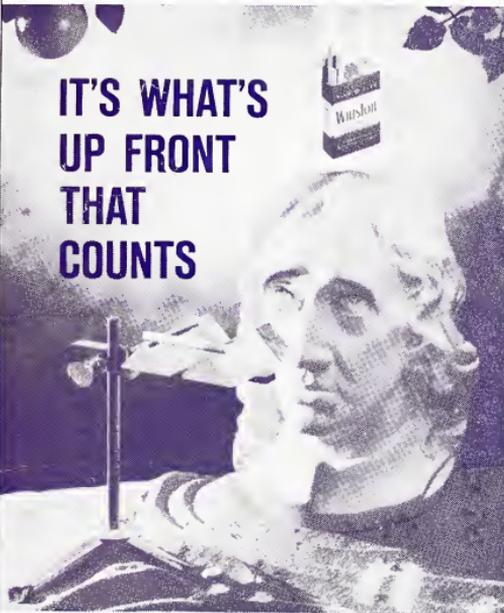

From the Ontario, N. Y., Wayne County Mail: "West Walworth Volunteer Fire Department will blow the siren 15 minutes before the start of each fire."

Her hobbies and ambitions are part of her major field. She likes to sew, design hats and cook and plans to become a designer and a home economics instructor.

Neat and debonair, Dot is a native of Savannah, Georgia, and a graduate of Alfred E. Beach High School.

She was elected "Miss Home Economics" of 1959-60. The Spotlight is proud to add Dorothy Lawton, a talented young lady, to this column.

Faurot Blames Coaches and Presidents For College Football Code Violations

College presidents and football coaches are primarily responsible for the violations of athlete recruiting rules which are giving big time college football "a sour reputation," says Don Faurot, now University of Missouri director of athletics, after years of coaching.

His views are given in the November Reader's Digest in a signed article, "Is College Football Destroying Itself?" condensed from the Saturday Evening Post.

"When a college corrupts an athlete by paying him under the table," says Faurot, "you can be pretty sure that the coach not only knows about it but probably instigated it. . . . As for college presidents, some have been coerced into putting up with dishonesty, some have winked at it, some have been too naive to know what is happening. . . ."

Faurot feels it imperative that everyone concerned with college football acknowledge the abuses and take corrective action.

"First of all," he writes, "educators must enforce the rules governing college athletics. Simply refusing to schedule teams which operate outside the rules would quickly whip into line those colleges which now value winning football teams above honesty. . . ."

"School administrators must make it clear to their coaches that, they place integrity ahead of victory; that no amount of alumni pressure after a losing season will affect the coach's job, whereas under-the-table aid to athletes will get him fired. I'm still idealist enough not to see much difference between paying a boy under the table to win for you and having some gambler pay him to lose."

SSC and Morris Battle to 3-3 Tie

By Jolly Stephens

The Savannah State College Tigers and the Morris College Hornets played a tremendous defensive game, on a soaking wet field, as they tied 8-8. This was the first conference game for both teams. Over a period of five years these two teams have won two each and tied one.

During the early minutes of the first quarter, James Davis of SSC blocked a kick on their own 22 yard strip. But the SSC offensive could not move the ball any further than the 16 yard line; so Morris took over on downs. The Hornets moved the ball to their 40 yard line before they were forced to kick.

But again their kick was blocked, this time by Eliza McGraw. On the next play SSC's John Owens carried the ball to the Morris 22 yard line; then James Davis, in fullback position, passed the ball to end McGraw in the end zone for a SSC touchdown. The point after touchdown was good when Davis passed to Lawrence Williams in the flat. The first quarter ended with SSC 8, Morris 0.

In the second quarter SSC had a substantial drive from their 28 yard line to the Morris 30 before Morris took over on downs. But on the next play Hossis of SSC intercepted a Morris pass on the 35 yard line and galloped to the 25.

Freshman's Outlook

Several freshmen were interviewed by reporters of the Tiger's Roar staff in order to obtain a random sample of views and evaluations of Savannah State College held by the newest members of the Savannah State College Family. The following are the views of Savannah State College as the Freshmen see it.

Carrie Louise Gultor, Savannahian, who plans to major in Biology. "The instructors aren't as rigid as was expected. This fact relieved some of the tension that had accumulated before entering SSC. The majority of the upperclassmen seem to be very friendly and understanding. They make one feel as if he has always been a part of the SSC family. College life is not the 'headache' I expected. I'm looking forward to a long happy stay."

Otis Mitchell, Savannahian, who plans to major in Biology. "Savannah State College is a very wonderful college, serving its purpose. It couldn't be any better; here you get a chance to meet a lot of people. I have no dislike for the school or its personnel. We have a well prepared faculty and staff. College to me is like a foreign country; you are forever learning things."

Harvey Bryant, a native of Woodbine, Georgia, and graduate of Ralph J. Bunche High School. When asked to comment on orientation week, Bryant stated, "I think orientation week gave the students a chance to gain helpful information and meet fellow freshmen."

Marjorie Dalida commented that "the College Campus is very beautiful and interesting."

Clinton Robinson, a graduate of Alfred E. Beach High School, described the campus as very picturesque.
